

IHA (Iconography and History of Art) is a consolidated research group composed by art historians who share the iconographic analysis of the images and architectural spaces as a preferred methodology. The activity of this research group throughout the history of the Universitat Jaume I has been constant and has resulted in a vast research production reflected in the direction of numerous R&D projects, in many books and articles and in the papers presented every year by its members at national and international conferences. Moreover, IHA has organized numerous conferences and curated exhibitions of international relevance, its members have been performed and directed many PhD, published in scientific journals, organized summer courses and hosted other activities related to the fields of research and teaching in the History of Art. Universitat Jaume I has recognized IHA as a High Performance Research Group. IHA has also won two national U.N.E. awards for two different books, and has been awarded by Banco Santander with the VI Award of Scientific Divulgation. IHA has working relationships with many universities and research centres around the world.
